PACIFIC NORTHWEST

Fall & Winter are Soft in the Pacific Northwest

The Pacific Northwest dazzles with reds, golds, and oranges. Soft blues and mossy greens are reflected off creeks, lakes, and waterfalls. All are framed by majestic mountain ranges and deep river gorges. Wineries fill their casks with new vintages. Go on a rainforest walkabout. Discover charming towns. Then, head to the mountains for every winter sport imaginable. Imagine the soft sound of rain or snow, an immense feeling of peace, and sleeping well.

NEW FALL OPTIONS

A Taste of Autumn in the Pacific Northwest

The vivid autumn colors of harvest fill the Pacific Northwest with dazzling reds, golds, and oranges, making even New England jealous. The air teases your senses with scents of a bountiful earth. There are changing-leaf festivals and hiking trails—The Enchantments and Blackbird Island are perfect for exploring.

Northwest rainforests are mythic in the fall, waterfalls are more intense, and salmon swim in creeks where otters wait to catch them. The parks in northwestern cities are framed by the legendary Mt. Hood, Rainier, the Cascade Range, and the Olympic Forest. Discover the mighty Columbia River Gorge, whale watching, harvesting hops, and luscious apple orchards. The Pacific Northwest revels in autumn!

NEW WINTER OPTIONS

A Winter of Wonder in the Pacific Northwest

A winter vacation in the Pacific Northwest offers a world of choices. Snow-covered mountains rise up from mythic rivers. Lodges are designed for cozy evenings. Days can be filled with adventures or a tranquil escape where the texture of winter's silence makes life a gentle idyll. Dining is exceptional, and wineries are ready for private tastings during their "cellar season."

Skiing is sublime and the options are many. Trek a wildlife park with a guide—cooler weather brings out roaming animals. Explore a rainforest. Delight in fresh Dungeness crab and oyster farms. Discover charming communities. (This is the time of year for truffles and wine pairings.) Imagine holiday cheer that eases you straight through the winter months. In the Pacific Northwest, winter is a whisper of quiet promises.
